Big Business Breakfast is a big event

After a sell out inaugural breakfast for over 130 businesses last year, Wagga Wagga's second annual Big Business Breakfast will be held again on Friday 19 March, from 7.30am-9am.

A foremost speaker on global issues and one of the world's great thinkers and communicators, Dr Keith Suter will again be a major attraction at Wagga Wagga City Council's Big Business Breakfast.

"Dr Suter will provide an economic update on how Australia has fared during the Global Financial Crisis and techniques for building sustainability into the local economy," Council's Director of Economic Development, Fiona Wilson said.

"The idea behind the Big Business Breakfast is to bring local business leaders together to listen to advice from an internationally renowned speaker, as well as network with other business and industry representatives.

"This event is designed for any business representative, regardless of the size or turnover of the business."

The event will be held at NSW TAFE Riverina Institute's Wagga Campus with breakfast to be prepared and served by students studying Commercial Cookery, along with their teachers.

Business and industry representatives who would like to attend the Big Business Breakfast are welcome, but are encouraged to book early as seats are limited. Cost is $35 per person or $95 for three tickets, which includes breakfast.

The event is sponsored by Wagga Wagga City Council with Wagga RSL, WDF Professional, Defence Support Reserves and Country Energy.

Tickets for the event can be purchased in person at Wagga Wagga Civic Theatre, online at www.civictheatre.com.au or by phoning the theatre on 6926 9688.
